Proactive Planning for the Upcoming Sunset of Estate Tax Law Changes

Communication and planning have always been essential when attempting to transfer wealth efficiently. Tax planning can also play a significant role for larger estates. Currently, the federal estate tax laws are very generous, however, when the 2017 Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA) rules expire at the end of 2025, that might not be the case. We believe in proactive tax planning and waiting until the tail-end of these time constrained rules could cost you. We like to be ahead of changes, especially when it comes to potentially major tax liability.

current lifetime estate and gift tax exemption will revert to pre-TCJA levels and will be cut in half and adjusted for inflation on January 1, 2026. With current inflation statistics, this could bring the amounts to around $7 million for individuals and $14 million for couples in 2026.

While there could very well be new tax legislation between now and the expiration date, when reviewing estate plans, families should consider that this TCJA provision is scheduled to expire. Proactive estate and tax planning could help avoid a costly missed opportunity.

While many Americans do not need to worry about this sunset tax law, as their net worth does not meet the minimum, it is still important that they have estate planning documents to help transfer assets and wealth to their loved ones efficiently. Also, some states have estate tax transfer taxes that start at much lower levels than the federal amount. For those who are close to the potential after sunset federal limits, but not there yet, they should watch the growth of their net worth to stay on top of it. Wealthy individuals and families should not procrastinate, and we

The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA)

Starting in 2018, the TCJA doubled the estate and gift, and GST tax exclusion amount. As our chart shows, this exclusion has moved from $5.49 million for an individual in 2017, all the way up to $13.61 million in 2024. For couples in 2024, the tax exclusion is $27.22 million.

The doubled amount sunsets, or expires, on December 31, 2025. For high-net-worth individuals, this could affect wealth transfer strategies. As the tax law presently stands, the

Wealth Transfer and Strategic Gifting

The passing of a loved one brings many emotional challenges, so having your estate plan carefully prepared well in advance can offer the solace of knowing your loved ones will not have to navigate financial and legal challenges while they are grieving. There are two major ways to transfer wealth: leaving an inheritance after you pass, or gifting during your lifetime.

The latter can be particularly alluring and can offer some tax-saving possibilities. Many families can look at transferring wealth during someone's lifetime without incurring any federal gift or estate taxes. This is usually in addition to the annual exclusion for gifts, which in 2024 is $18,000 for individuals and $36,000 for couples.

For example, John has an estate valued at $15 million and in 2024 transfers $10 million to a trust for his children. Under the current TCJA provisions, he can use the $13.61 million exclusion to make that $10 million transfer tax-free. However, if he waits until 2026, the exclusion amount is scheduled to be about $7 million after the TCJA sunset, meaning $3 million of the $10 million gift would be taxable. A relatively small difference in timing can result in a huge tax bill.

is critical to understand potential tax implications and ensure everyone involved in your estate plan, including your heirs, optimize and take advantage of the best strategies for your situation.

Wealth Transfer and a Bypass (Family) Trust

Another popular method of optimizing tax exemptions for married couples is a Bypass Trust. When one spouse passes, a portion of their assets can be placed into a trust which passes to their beneficiaries on the death of the surviving spouse. The assets placed into this trust, and any appreciation of those assets, are protected from estate taxes when the surviving spouse passes away.

This strategy, like many others in estate planning, can be complicated and the tax ramifications and appropriateness should always be discussed with a qualified estate planning attorney and financial professional prior to making any decisions.

Portability for Estate and Gift Tax

In very simple terms, portability is a way for spouses to combine their exemption from estate and gift tax. In most circumstances, it's a process where a surviving spouse can realize and use the unused estate tax exemption of a deceased spouse, so then, the surviving spouse has both their own exemption from estate and gift tax and, the unused exemption of the deceased spouse. This can be a highly complicated process that requires filings and needs to be discussed with your financial professional and estate planning attorney.

Keeping Your Estate Plan Current – Don't Forget the Basics!

Even if your estate plan is not affected by the sunseting TCJA provisions, it is still wise to have an updated estate plan. Life happens and not having proper documents can cause undue stress and work for your loved ones. It's important to keep your estate plan updated. Divorces, marriages, children coming of age, new children, or grandchildren – are among the major, but easily overlooked occurrences that can directly affect your estate plan.

Revisiting your beneficiaries is important as well. Many people grow fond of new charities, individuals may no longer be appropriate candidates, or percentages may change. Confirming who you have chosen as primary and contingent beneficiaries is very important.

You've spent a lifetime acquiring your estate, it is important to preserve your legacy in the

Consider These Major Documents for Your Estate Plan

- ⇒ Will: This document will state the terms under which you wish all your assets to be distributed upon your death. A Will also include other extremely important decisions, from the guardian of your children to who is the executor of your estate.
- ⇒ Health Directive: This document clearly states your healthcare desires and appoints an agent to make these desired decisions if you become unable to do so yourself.
- ⇒ Durable Power of Attorney: This document appoints an agent to act on your behalf, from financial transactions to real estate matters, while you are still alive. The Durable Power of Attorney terminates upon your death.
- ⇒ Living Trust: A living trust allows you to take assets you own and place them into the ownership of a trust you create during your lifetime. The trust owns your assets and you manage them while you are alive.

Additionally, each converted amount is subject to its own five-year holding period. Investors should consult a tax advisor before deciding to make a conversion. Rules and laws governing 529 plans are varied and subject to change. As with other investments, there are generally fees and expenses associated with participation in a 529 plan. There is also a risk that these plans may lose money or not perform well enough to cover college costs as anticipated. Most states offer their own 529 programs, which may provide advantages and benefits exclusively for their residents. Investors should consider, before investing, whether the investor's or the designated beneficiary's home state offers any tax or other benefits that are only available for investment in such state's 529 college savings plan. Such benefits include financial aid, scholarship funds, and protection from creditors. The tax implications can vary significantly from state to state. Tax laws and provisions may change at any time. Death of the contributor prior to the end of the five-year period may result in a portion of the contribution to be included in the contributor's estate.
